How do I know if any of the exhibitors need my company’s services/products?
If participating exhibitors have provided a list of current and/or future service/product/construction project needs it is linked to their company name on the exhibitor list.

I reviewed the exhibitors list and none of the exhibitors indicate that they need my company's services/products, should I still attend?
As a business representative, you know what kind of prime companies and/or government agencies would utilize the type of services/products your company offers. If you attend, you can speak with prime company/agency reps to find out if they utilize your company’s services/products and who the appropriate contact person would be to follow up with to discuss.

I've selected the exhibitor's name on the exhibitor's list but there is no services/products list attached, what should I do?
If an exhibitor has not provided us with service/product/construction project needs, you can still attend to meet the company/agency representative and discover the information for yourself.

I reviewed the exhibitor list and am already doing business with some of the prime listed companies or have met them in the past, should I still attend?
As a company representative who is looking to increase sales, it is always a good idea to get out and meet and/or follow-up with the prime company representative you’ve previously met because the more you are in front of a prime company they will get to know you and remember what your company does.
